Henry Reip House Baltimore not accessible/U. of Md. c. 1820

The Henry Reip House, located on the west side of North Paca between West Fayette and West Lexington Streets, is a three bay wide, three story high brick row house atop a basement and topped by a gently sloping gable roof and single central dormer. The first story facade and interior were altered early in the twentieth century to accomodate a store front. The second story is articulated by three windows, now blocked, which retain their original, slightly projecting stone sills and flush wooden lintels flanking plain corner blocks. Conforming to local practice, the third story windows are squatter in proportion than their second story counterparts but they retain the same decoration. The facade, executed in Flemish bond, lacks its cornice but retains its pedimented dormer.

Henry Reip, who built this dwelling in the early 1820's, was the head of an important family of metal workers and ironsmiths whose business flourished by midcentury. Ovens produced by the Reip firm are found throughout the state. The house itself is an important survivor, with its trades of fine Greek Revival detail, of the extensive mixed commercila and residential development which took place in this block south of Lexington Market in the second decade of the 19th century.

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Henry Reip house located at 122 North Paca, on the west side of the street between West Fayette and West Lexington Streets, is a three bay wide, three story high brick rowhouse atop a basement and topped by a gently sloping gable roof and single central dormer.

The east facade is executed in Flemish bond which has been subsequently covered by a layer of white paint, now flaking off to reveal the bricks beneath. The first story which once contained the main entrance flanked by two equal-sized windows was obliterated in the early twentieth century to accommodate a store front. That store front is presently blocked up and the double doors with two lights each are padlocked. The entire first story was reworked in the early twentieth century with little evidence remaining of the original nineteenth century interior. (The extent of extant original woodwork and trim on the upper stories is unknown as access to this building was difficult at the time of this survey.)

The second story is articulated by three windows, now blocked, which probably contained 6/6, double hung sash originally. These windows still possess their original, slightly projecting stone sills and flush wooden lintels. The lintels are flanked by plain corner blocks.

Between the second and third stories are two rectangular panels, twentieth century shop signs.

The third story is articulated by three windows in positions corresponding to the second story fenestration. These windows, though somewhat squatter in proportion than their second story counterparts, also originally contained 6/6, double hung sash. The third story windows are characterized by the same, slightly projecting stone sills and flush wooden lintels flanked by plain cornerblocks.

The cornice has been removed from under the eaves and replaced by an aluminum drain pipe. The gable roof is sheathed with a standing seam tin roof. A chimney occurs at the south gable abutting the neighboring circa 1880's multi-story commercial, brick structure.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Henry Reip house represents an important survivor of the extensive mixed commercial and residential development which took place in the area surrounding the Lexington Market in the second decade of the nineteenth century. This residence features a facade executed in Flemish bond with traces of fine Greek Revival detailing. Although the first floor was converted to commercial usage in the early twentieth century, the upper stories retain their original architectural detail, and the proportions and general integrity of this once elegant townhouse are preserved.

This house's builder and subsequent residents are inextricably connected with the history of this neighborhood. Henry Reip acquired this property and the adjacent two lots backing up on Diamond Alley, from John Eager Howard in 1814 and erected his "brick dwelling house" ("a three story and attic brick building with three story double back building"2) on what is called in the court records and proceedings "lot #1" or 122 North Paca Street. Henry Reip built this house between the time he acquired the land in 1814 and 1823 when the structure appears on Poppleton's 1823 map of Baltimore along with a whole row of similar houses adjacent to it on the west side of North Paca between West Lexington and West Fayette Streets.

Henry Reip, head of a whole family of metal workers and tinsmiths, died in 1859, leaving the house and the bulk of his estate to his wife Margaret who continued to reside at then 28 N. Paca. Upon Margaret Reip's death in 1880, the legal picture became complicated when her son Alfred, named trustee in his father's will, was sued by the other children, represented under the name of another son, Edward H. Reip, who were contesting their father's will. Henry Reip's will gave the "rest and remainder of estate, real personal and mixed to Sen. Alfred H. Reip, his heir and executor"3 in trust for the benefit of his wife Margaret and intended that upon her death, the estate could be divisible into seven equal parts, those portions being determined by the number of children and grandchildren. In 1882, the Circuit Court proceedings reveal that new trustees were appointed under the will and instructed to sell the "ground and premises" in question.4

Alfred Reip, also a metal worker, built a residence for himself, one block away, at 104 N. Greene Street, between 1837 and 1840. The 1840 Baltimore City Directory lists Alfred H. Reip as a tinner with a shop at 267 Baltimore Street and a residence on North Greene Street. 45 unto Mary A. Scanlon.

FAP 920/32 1/13/1882 Mortgage From Mary A. Scanlon to Emily J. Walker

"being the same piece or parcel of ground granted and conveyed by Andrew I. Trippe and George M. Gill, trustees, by deed received prior hereto to the said Mary Ann Scanlon. See also deed in fee from John Eager Howard to Henry Reip dated June 11, 1814 and recorded in WG 128/342 and see also the proceedings in the case of Alfred H. Reip vs. Edward H. Reip and others in the Circuit Court of said city intered on Docket 20A (1880)204"

JRB 212/171

Circuit Court records of Reip vs. Reip cited above list the fee simple property as part of Henry Reip's (d. 1859) estate transmitted to his heirs and his wife Margaret H. Reip (d.1880):

"A lot of ground described in a Deed from John Eager Howard to said Henry Reip dated June 11, 1814 and recorded among the Land Records of Baltimore County in Liber Wg 128/342 beginning on the west side of Paca Street 75' south from Lexington and running southerly about 24' with a uniform depth of 150' to Diamond Alley which lot is divided into two lots as will appear by the plot herewith filed, upon which the bounds are laid out one of which lot (#1) is improved on Paca St. by a three story and attic brick building with three story double back building about 9' wide by 20' deep, as by said plot appears. This lot being about 12'-2 1/2" front by 47'-6" deep within alleyway 17'-7" long and 3' wide in the rear."

PC 28/455

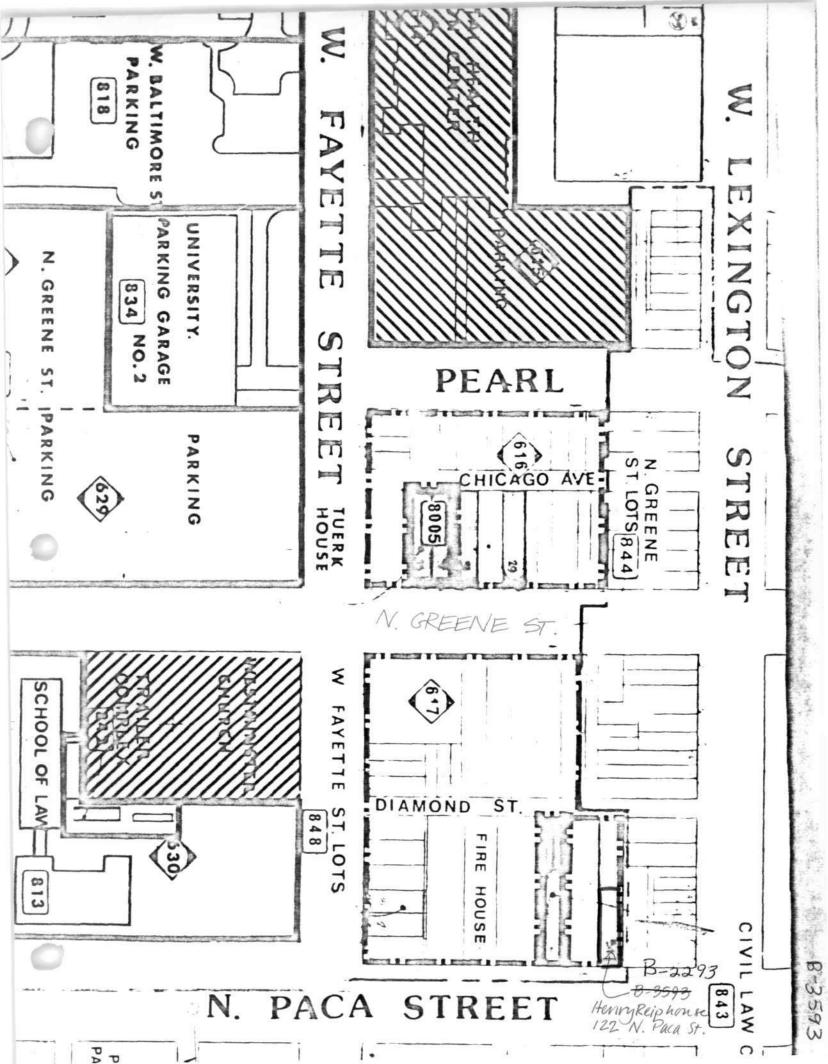

Henry Reip's will gives "rest and remainder of estate real, personal and mixed to son Alfred H. Reip, his heirs and executor" in trust for the benefit of his wife Margaret and then all would be divisible into seven equal parts, portions being determined by the number of children and grandchildren.

FAP 854/213 11/12/1879 Deed Alfred Reip conveys to Joseph Smith three lots of ground including the one described below:

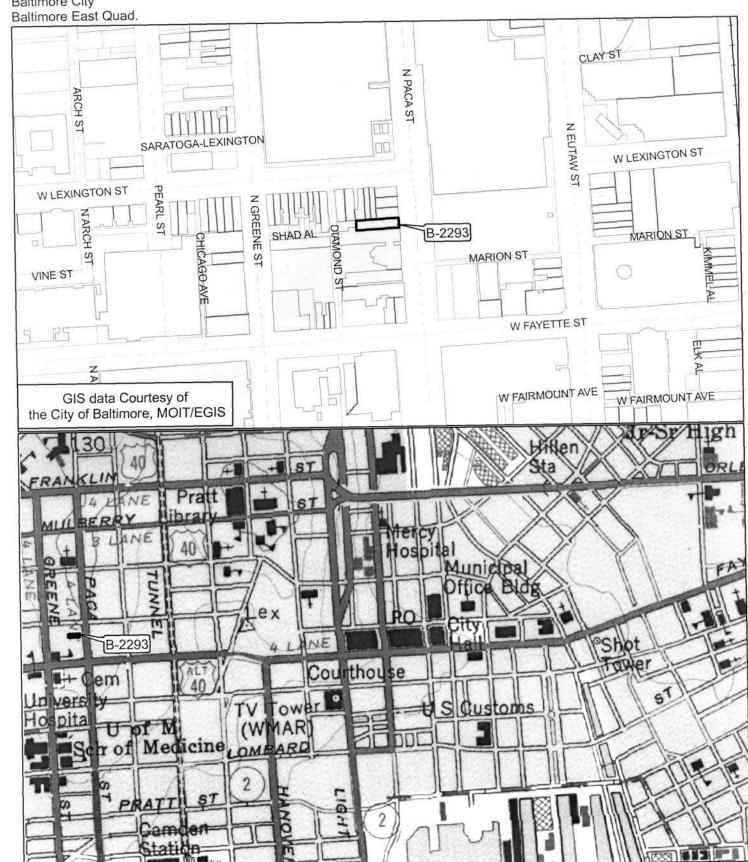

Beginning for the third lot on the west side of Paca St. below Lexington and Fayette Streets, at the distance of 16' south from the brick dwelling house in which the said

The building is three bays wide and three stories high with stone foundation and brick building walls.

The first story facade is a storefront with a centered flat wood door. To the left of the door is a flat plate glass store window. To the right of the door is a double light flat plate glass store window. The door and the windows punctuate a wood frame. A large sign carrying the store name surmounts the door and windows and spans the entire facade.

The second and third story facades are each punctuated by three flat, double hung windows. The second story windows are of six over six lights. The third story facade windows are of one over one lights. Both sets of windows have stone sills and wood lintles. Fenestration is symetrical.

A plain wood cornice surmounts the facade. The roof is high pitched with a centered dormer boarded over window, double hung with two over two lights.
